Thanks, Valois. I provided some comments in the doc. I'm copying Leslie so that she can also provide input.

Does that make sense?

Hi Lucita,

The attached document is Cadmus' first cut at developing summaries of comments on two topics and responses from the admin record for our response to comments document. Would you take a look at this, please, to see if it fits with what you were expecting to see?

There is some explanation provided below about referencing sections in the fact sheets to keep the responses shorter. Please look that over to see if you agree.

Thanks!

Subject: Sample Dewey Burdock responses

Hi Valois and Bruce,

Attached are two sample response sections addressing comments on the Dewey-Burdock Project. They relate to: (1) concerns about the presence of faults, fractures, breccia pipes, historical exploration boreholes or any other breaches in confining zones and (2) concerns about adequate monitoring.

These responses are based heavily on the Class III fact sheet, which appears to be the most comprehensive document, with references to the Class V fact sheet as well. There are questions at the end of each response related to comments that may not be addressed.

Please let me know if this is the length/level of detail you were expecting. We could, of course, copy in volumes of information, but we instead referenced the excerpted parts of the fact sheet so that they can be considered part of the response, should the permit be appealed. Most paragraphs end with "for more about this, see section x of the fact sheet," to limit the length of the response and guide you to the source of the text (which you requested).

Please let me know if you have any initial thoughts or would like to discuss these.
